

First in signaling. First in safety.

Orion Safety Products is the world's leading manufacturer of emergency flares and other signaling devices. When you use flares, chances are you're using an Orion product, backed by nearly 100 years of innovation, engineering technology and superior safety.

We specialize in manufacturing a wide range of flares, signaling devices and other products for all types of safety purposes. Our sales are divided between commercial/government business and consumer/retail business.

When you work with Orion, our professional staff will help you determine which emergency signaling devices fit your requirements.

Orion's commercial business involves the sale of highway (used for traffic management on roadways) and railway emergency flares (used for signaling other trains) and backfire torches (used in forest fire management). Our customers include:

State and federal police, highway, forestry and fire departments

Railroads

Commercial firms such as public utilities

Orion's consumer/retail business involves the sale of automotive emergency flares, Coast Guard-approved marine signal devices, first aid kits, wilderness signal and survival products, safety lightsticks, as well as products for house and home such as our Chimfex® chimney fire suppressant.

Our retail products are sold in major chain outlets throughout the United States, as well as through distributors to other retail stores all across the country.
